

$10,000 or More Donated

Thousands Jam Stricken Cities

By VERYL SANDERSON
Assistant State Editor

Thousands of spectators jammed the streets of Oelwein and Charles City Sunday to view the tornado-stricken communities.

Thousands of dollars were collected for the needy.

In Oelwein, the figure of donations was placed between $1,800 and $2,000.

In Charles City, contributions totaled $9,286.

Cleanup operations came to a stand still.

Sightseers went along pre-planned disaster routes and were prohibited from leaving their vehicles or traveling on side streets. Mammoth traffic jams contributed to the inability of cleanup crews to continue their work.

Influx Anticipated

City officials and various service clubs had approved the controlled-tour idea, after anticipating a great influx of the sightseers anyway.

At one time, traffic was bumper to bumper for nearly five miles north of Charles City.

Traffic extended a mile and a half north and south from Oelwein.

Terrific Volume

The Highway Patrol Headquarters at Oelwein reported several minor collisions. An officer commented, "There was a terrific volume of traffic."

Oelwein Chief of Police Jim Forsch said, "We estimate somewhere between 6-7,000 cars went through Oelwein Sunday."

"It went real smoothly for us. The streets were in good shape. As a matter of fact, the cleanup work is going quite well."

"I think in 6 months we'll have a new city."

Reaction from Charles City citizens was mixed.

Some said the controlled tour would help bring in funds for the needy.

Others claimed it only brought about a halt in the cleanup work and will bring more sightseers in the next few days, particularly next week.

Meanwhile, the Red Cross reports volunteer nurses have given 10,000 tetanus toxoid immunizations to disaster sufferers and cleanup workers, since the tornado hit Charles City May 15.

The State Department of Health and the Red Cross have maintained as many as four different first aid and tetanus immunization stations at various locations.

Bare Beginning

Also, at least 242 families have registered for rehabilitation assistance with the Red Cross in Charles City. This is only a bare beginning says Glen Haydon, Red Cross Executive Director.

A quick check of Red Cross expenditures last week in Charles City shows $5,278 for household furnishings; $4,416 for mass care; $14,085 for food, clothing and maintenance; $336 for medical and nursing.

This totals more than $24,500.

Hex House

This house in Vincennes, Ind., has caused more than one tourist head to turn. The intricate designs were achieved with a machine patented by local inventor and artist Leonard Crow. The device can duplicate almost any pattern with kaleidoscopic effect.

Arts Program Okayed for UIC

FAYETTE — The new Master of Arts in teaching program at Upper Iowa College has received approval from the State Board of Public Instruction.

Approval was granted for a three-year period following recommendation by the branch of professional education and teacher certification of the Iowa State Department of Public Instruction.

Registration for the graduate program will be June 5. Applications for admission will be accepted until that date.

The MAT program will be conducted exclusively in the summer for the first two years, following which it may become a year-round program. Students may take six semester hours of work in each of two five-week summer sessions, and could qualify for the MAT degree in a minimum of three full summer programs.

Further information regarding the Master of Arts in Teaching program can be obtained by contacting Dr. Paul C. Pickett at UIC.

Students Receive Chemistry Awards

AMES — Two students from Northeast Iowa were included among 12 chemistry majors at Iowa State University who have received cash awards and scholarships from the Phillips Petroleum Company Professional Development Fund for colleges.

Keith Geiken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Geiken of rural Vinton, and Patrick Plummer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Plummer of New Hartford, each received a $30 award.

Mayor Honors Zone Group

IOWA FALLS — Mayor Earle Fitz honored the Iowa Falls Planning and Zoning Commission for 20 years of service this week.

Mayor Fitz noted the service to the city council and the people of Iowa Falls since the formation of the commission in May, 1948.

Four members are still serving the commission, including Margaret Gilbert, Grace Price, Sue Stringer and Dick Welden. Mrs. Gilbert has served as secretary during that time.

Wartburg Confers 267 Degrees

WARTBURG — An American failure to encourage its young people to participate in building a new society has been the underlying cause for the present student protest movement, charged Dr. Arthur Larson, director of the rule of law research center at Duke University, here Saturday.

Speaking at Wartburg College's 118th commencement, he said, "American society has not provided its college-age generation with specific outlets for its immense idealism and energy—outlets that are both inspiring and constructive."

Concrete Ways

"It has failed to set before its young people concrete ways in which they can apply their intellectual energies to building an exciting new society."

Dr. Larson suggested a two-part solution. The first must be recognition by the American public and its educators "that there are glaring defects in our institutions that are crying to be put right," he said, and then youth must be shown, in concrete detail, that "it is possible to solve these human problems by the application of human intelligence."

Without this combination answer, he warned, "you have nihilism."

He said the world knows war is ruled out in resolving international questions, but added, "What we have not realized is that diplomacy itself is obsolete, because it is the handmaiden of armaments." Quoting Winston Churchill, Dr. Larson said, "We arm to parley."

Organization of knowledge, Dr. Larson said, could be accomplished by exploiting new technology, such as electronic computers.

267 Grads

Two hundred sixty-seven Wartburg students received degrees during the ceremony, including 50 who will complete requirements at the end of the summer term.

Two Injured In Crash Near Waverly

WAVERTLY — Two Waterloo youths were injured in a one-car accident two miles south of Waverly on Hwy. 63 about 11:40 a.m. Sunday.

The Iowa Highway Patrol said the car was driven by Michael James Fuiks, 20, of 234 Airline Highway, Waterloo. Fuiks was northbound on Hwy. 63 and was the middle car of three northbound vehicles. The back car had pulled out to pass when Fuiks started to pull out to pass.

The car already passing honked at Fuiks. Fuiks then swung back to the right, apparently hit the shoulder, then went back to the left crossed the highway, into the left hand ditch, rolled twice, landing on top.

He was treated at St. Francis Hospital for a lacerated right hand, bruised left elbow, and abrasions of the left hip. His brother, David E. Fuiks, was admitted to St. Francis with body bruises and a possible back injury.
